Dear Ray,

Thank you for your response. In fact, I'm doing a research about the Syrian refugees initiative which resettled more than 25000 Syrian refugees between November 2015 and March 2016. I couldn't find any information about evaluating of the initiative on the government website, although IRCC says that it continues to monitor and evaluate how the Syrian refugees are settling into life in Canada. Please see this link:

<https://www.canada.ca/en/immigration-refugees-citizenship/services/refugees/welcome-syrian-refugees/looking-future.html>

I'm not aware of any specific evaluation that was conducted, but IRCC says that it's monitoring and evaluating how the refugees are doing in Canada. Therefore, I think the department is using some performance indicators like the enrolment in English or French classes rates, the unemployment rates, etc..

I'm also looking for any reports, memos, briefing notes etc.. which have to do with evaluating the initiative itself since it's unusual to bring this amount of refugees in such short period of time.

Thank you,

Maan Alhmidi

In an effort to better understand and clarify your request, I wonder if you could be a bit more specific regarding the term “evaluation”.
